Italian tenor Vittorio Grigolo is battling with a cold, which is threatening his final performance as Rodolfo in La bohème at the Metropolitan Opera in New York on Friday.

"I have a cold. The weather changed in New York. First it was hot, then it was freezing. I had to cancel some interviews, but I am getting better for La bohème."

Vittorio has been receiving standing ovations for his debut production at the Met, where he has been appearing in Franco Zeffirelli's production, alongside soprano Maija Kovalevska.

He's also celebrating success in the US classical charts, with his latest CD The Italian Tenor reaching the number two spot.

"I am happy that the public is giving such a great response to my effort and such a great response to this beautiful album. I am a dream seller. I always give my emotions to people."
